The Attorneys of the Defendant concluded as follows:

"That this Court, having rejected every contrary claim and/or action, in terms of the merit of the case, rejects the objection of the other party (Plaintiff) proposed for all the reasons specified in the defense deeds and, due to this, confirms the exclusion from liabilities of Parmalat S.p.a. under EA of the amount requested by ABN Amro Bank N.V, with the losing party covering the case expenses, fees and duties."

HOW THE PROCEEDINGS HAVE PROGRESSED

With an appeal in accordance with art. 99 of Italian Royal Decree (RD) 267/42, Abn Amro Bank made an objection to the exclusion of its credits from the liabilities of Parmalat S.p.A. under EA, following a ruling by Parma Law Court dated 12/16/2004, asking for the admission of the credit claimed.

As the basis of its request, the objecting party claimed that it provided Wishaw Trading S.A. with financing for a total of USD 10,000,000.00, financing which was used by Wishaw by means of the issuing, on March 27, 2003, of a promissory note guaranteed as backing by Parmalat S.p.a.

The Judge Appointed had excluded the request to be admitted among the credits by Abn Amro Bank, finding that the documents produced by the objecting party were without a certain date; this conclusion was incorrect as the applicable law was the law of the State of New York, with the resulting inapplicability of art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code and art. 45 of the Italian Bankruptcy Law (LF); in the light of the documents which were produced, the requirement of the certainty of the date existed, in any case.

The party against whom the objection was made, Parmalat S.p.A. under EA, appeared, contesting the claims of the other party and asking for the rejection of the objection made by the other party and the confirmation of the exclusion decree objected to.

After the filing of the briefs in accordance with arts. 180, 183 and 184, the objecting party insisted for the admission of the oral proof claimed in the introductory deed and in the evidentiary brief; with a ruling dated 12/07/2006, quashing the reservation, the Proceeding Judge rejected the appeal for the admission of proof made by the objecting party and set a hearing on 10/24/2007 for the establishing of the pleadings.

The parties made their pleadings and, at the hearing on October 24, 2007, the case was assigned to decision.

REASONS FOR THE DECISION

The request of the objecting party has no grounds and, therefore, must be rejected.

Indeed, with regard to the applicable laws and standards, European Regulation 1346 of June 30, 2000 orders the application, to insolvency proceedings, of the law of the Member State in whose territory the proceeding itself was opened. Again on the basis of the Regulations, this Law ("lex concursus" - conditions for the opening, conduct and closure of insolvency proceedings) establishes - among other things – "the claims which are to be lodged against the debtor's estate and the treatment of claims arising after the opening of the insolvency proceedings, the rules governing the lodging, verification and admission of claims."

These certainly include the rules which relate to the merit of the non-objecting against the Administration proceeding and, therefore, the inadmissibility of these within the Liabilities of the same deeds and documents without a certain date; to be more specific, because they are dictated to protect the mass of creditors as a whole, articles 44 and 45 of the Italian Bankruptcy Law (LF) and art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code must be considered to make up the lex concursus and are, therefore, applicable to this case here.

With regard, then, to the position of the Extraordinary Commissioner, there may be no doubt about the fact that he, like the Bankruptcy Receiver, must be considered as a third party with respect to the creditors who request admission among the liabilities and with respect to the bankrupt party, for all the deeds and the negotiations carried out by the company in bonis (when solvent); for this very reason, those who expect to claim a credit against the insolvency proceeding must demonstrate the certainty of the date on which this credit arose in accordance with article 2704 of the Italian Civil Code (see, for example: Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, September 22, 2004, no. 18998; Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, June 4, 2003, no. 8914; Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, Section I, May 28, 2003, no. 8545; Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, Section I, July 20, 2000, no. 9539, in Giust. Civ. [Civil Law], Mass. 2000, 1580; Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, February 8, 2000, no. 1370, in Giust. Civ. [Civil Law], Mass. 2000, 269; Judgement of the Supreme Court of Cassation, May 6, 1998, no. 4551, in Giust. Civ. [Civil Law], Mass. 1998, 945). In accordance with art. 45 of the Italian Bankruptcy Law (LF) and art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code, a non-authenticated private agreement may only be objected to with regard to the bankruptcy procedure (in this case, the Extraordinary Administration) if it has a certain date; to be more specific, art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code, in ordering that the certainty of the date of a private agreement (not registered or authenticated) must be considered to be in place with respect to the third parties from the day on which a fact other than the events specifically envisaged therein occurs, which established the prior nature of the formation of the document in an equally certain manner, leaves it to the interpreter to decide, case by case, if equal probative weight can be assigned to a fact.

Art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code, then, provides three examples of legal deed/document: the authentication of the signing of the agreement, the registration of the agreement and the reproduction of the agreement in a public deed/document; in all three cases, what is of importance is not the original date of the primitive document but the subsequent date of the legal deed/document which gives the document a certain date.

It must be pointed out, then, that the application of art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code has to be especially rigorous as the law in question aims to protect settlement creditors in the precise case - which is statistically frequent - in which the debtor, despite the opening of the insolvency proceedings, carries out actions relating to the disposal of its assets or takes on obligations.

With regard to the merit of this case, none of the documents produced during the proceedings report a declaration, a date and a signature of a public officer.

Another of the main arguments of the defense team for the objecting party is the email messages extracted from the ABN database which record the date relative to the operations concluded by the bank with its clients; however, what prevents us from finding that these emails comply with the requirement of the “certain date” is the content of the emails themselves, given that, in them, the reference to guarantees provided by Parmalat S.p.a. is extremely generic (which guarantee? for which operation?), so technical consultancy on the matter would also be of no significance.

Furthermore, not even the further documentation produced by the plaintiff during the objection stage provides the proof required for the admission of the claimed credit among the liabilities.

There is, in fact, no basis on which to believe that the promissory note, the guarantee, and the letters among the deeds were actually written on the dates specified on them while, with regard to the fax, the date can be modified by the user.

As no proof has been provided that the guarantees covered by this case were formed on a date prior to the date of the opening of the settlement procedure, the request of the plaintiff cannot be accepted.

With regard to the evidentiary requests re-proposed by the objecting party during the pleading stage, it must be pointed out that the proof by means of witnesses claimed by the objecting party cannot be admitted as the facts for unequivocally establishing the certainty of the date of a non-authenticated private agreement and, therefore, the prior nature of the formation of the document, so that it can be objected to with regard to the third parties, in accordance with art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code, cannot be the subject of testimonial proof (see Court of Cassation, No. 3742/86; Court of Cassation 12/12/1974, no. 4235; Court of Cassation 6/9/1972, no. 1806); this principle, as has been seen, finds its logic and legal grounds in the regulations of art. 2704 of the Italian Civil Code which, by establishing that the date of a private agreement, not authenticated, can only be verified, with respect to the third parties, with registration or by means of the equivalent situations and facts, specified by clause 1, including all those facts which can establish the prior nature of the formation of the document, implicitly excludes testimonial proof (Court of Cassation, May 9, 1962, no. 931), with the consequent inadmissibility also for the case in which it deals with direct and immediate verification of these facts, instrumentally with regard to the verification of the date ("Although testimonial proof may be admitted and, therefore, by presumption, to demonstrate the date of the intervening physical impossibility of one of the signers of the document or the date of the registration or the death, when the public records have been destroyed or lost, and these means of proof can also be invoked in order to demonstrate one of the other facts or events which can be used to show, in an equally certain manner, that the document was formed before that fact or event, testimonial proof is not admitted and, therefore, by presumption, to verify the date of the private agreement not authenticated with third parties" (Court of Cassation, June 28, 1963, no. 1760).

The request for exhibition also appears to be totally without significance, given that the reconstructions made by the Extraordinary Commissioner or by audit companies not immediately subsequent to the opening of the Extraordinary Administration procedure could not, in any case, provide the proof of the certain date, this only being able to show that, on the date of the reconstruction, there was the mention of a guarantee, but it cannot prove anything with regard to when this was formed.

Expenses covered by the losing party.

FOR THESE REASONS

The Court, with a definitive ruling, rejecting all contrary or different appeals and claims, decides as follows:

A) rejects the objection;

B) orders the objecting party to pay the case expenses in favor of the defendant, at € 18,400.00, that is, € 200.00 for expenses, € 2,200.00 for duties and € 16,000.00 for fees, as well as reimbursement of general expenses, VAT and Lawyers Social Security Fund (CPA) contributions.
